Remembering the heroes

Col. Ross Glover stands at attention during the annual Memorial Day ceremony at Marietta National Cemetery on Monday. The event, organized by the National Memorial Day Association of Georgia, featured the traditional posting-of-the-colors flag ceremony, guest speakers and a gun salute. It has been held for more than 70 years.

CEREMONIES

People gathered across the metro area and the country to honor the nation's war dead. "Today on Memorial Day we honor Americans who showed no greater love for the American people," Vice President Mike Pence said at Arlington National Cemetery.

SERVICE'S TOLL

Over the weekend, the Army asked service members and veterans: "How has serving impacted you?" Many responded with positive stories, but others recounted tales of stress, illness and suicidal thoughts. A3

'AN EMOTIONAL DAY'

For this Georgia war widow, Memorial Day is a chance to visit the grave of her husband, who died nine years ago in Afghanistan. She brings flowers and the latest news. "I know he's listening," she said. A3
